VOL. I November, 1959-January, 1960 NO. 4

On Reaching an Age

During the fall of 1959 a fair amount of attention was paid to the ninetieth anniversary of Cornell University Press, the first university press to be established in this country. Comment—particularly on the Ithaca front—ranged from warm congratulations to genial scoffing on the part of some Cornell faculty members who were quick to point out the limited nature of Press operations at inception and the suspension of regular operations which lasted from 1884 until 1893; as if the same had not been the experience of Oxford University Press in its early years.

It is perfectly true that Cornell's first president, Andrew D. White, in 1869 founded not only what he envisioned as a university press in the tradition of Oxford and Cambridge but also a printing plant where students might earn their way through college. The beginnings were inauspicious, certainly, and such early publications as a French reader and volumes on North American ethnology were issued side by side with an alumni directory and the official University Registers. When a financial crisis spelled temporary doom for the Press as a regular full-time operation, chances are that few scholars manifested any great show of grief.

Yet for all the pallor of its initial years, Cornell University Press felt justified in stirring up a little fanfare for its anniversary. That the Press has not been in continuous operation for all ninety years is of relative unimportance; that it was the first to transplant to American soil a great European scholarly tradition is of the greatest importance.

What was being celebrated, then, is the idea behind scholarly publishing in America, which belongs in no sense to Cornell alone. If one were to attempt an evaluation of Cornell's contribution to the world of scholarly books, of prime importance would be the publications themselves; the fact of an anniversary is incidental. Cornell's anniversary could be legitimately observed by all American university presses. It was the anniversary of a philosophy of book publishing, an anniversary in which Cornell's fellow university presses take both pleasure and pride.

To attempt to distill this philosophy into a few—or many—words is doubtless impossible. Its essence, however, lies in the urgency of disseminating culture-knowledge at the highest level of truth. In an essay entitled "The Tale of the 'Ripe Scholar,'" which Cornell University Press reprinted for its anniversary, Francis Parkman wrote:

By culture we mean development, not polish or adornment, though these are its natural and by no means useless belongings. Using the word, then, in this sense, culture is with us a supreme necessity, not for the profit of a few but of all. The presence of minds highly and vigorously developed is the most powerful aid to popular education, and the necessary condition of its best success. In a country where the ruling power is public opinion, it is above all things necessary that the best and surest thought should have a fair share in forming it.*

* Reprinted from The Nation, December 23, 1869.

The university press has its function here in providing some of the tools of this "supreme necessity" and assisting in the development of vigorous and mature minds.

By making available the works of scholarship both to other scholars and to the questing layman, university presses contribute to the permanent base of knowledge which must underlie all cultural development. The motivations of scholarly publishing are not unlike those of scholarship itself. Parkman would approve of the increasingly large audience being reached nowadays by university press books, without sacrifice of any of the high ideals of scholarly publishing.

That which pleases it [the public taste] pays so much better in money and notoriety, and is so much cheaper of production, than the better article which does not please it, that the temptation to accept light work and high wages in place of hard work and low wages is difficult to resist. Nothing but a deep love of truth or of art can stand unmoved against it.

For the university publisher, this love of truth draws an unswerving line through the most violent fluctuations in economic conditions, reading trends, and all the rest, and the line extends straight from the establishment of the first university press on into the future.

The year 1869 looks like yesterday in comparison with the 1478 founding date of Oxford University Press; yet that date, too, is one which belongs to all university presses, and Cornell doubtless looks forward with as much pleasure to celebrating Oxford's five-hundredth anniversary as to its own centennial a decade hence.

"James Monroe may fairly be called the first important professional politician of the United States: that is, he was the first of our prominent men who chose politics as a career, clearly preferring public to private life despite occasional perfunctory disclaimers. Monroe's vocational objective over forty years, though never directly stated, was to hold responsible public office. No American ever succeeded better."

From the Introduction to The Autobiography of James Monroe, edited, with Introduction, by Stuart Gerry Brown. Syracuse University Press.

Sociological item: One of the books unaccountably missing from an exhibit of university press books at the recent annual meeting of the American Sociological Society was Sutherland's The Professional Thief, published by the University of Chicago Press.

"There are few of Shakespeare's sonnets which do not show traces of genius, and genius of an unusually beguiling kind. . . . Yet in the past ten years or so I have found them more and more disappointing."

From Yvor Winter's article in Four Poets on Poetry, edited by Don Cameron Allen. The Johns Hopkins Press.

"Puritan leaders, as internal troubles mounted, increasingly valued the utility of this oath. When, in 1639, the first printing press in the English-speaking colonies began operation in Boston, the first item struck off was the loyalty oath, followed by an almanac and the famed Bay Psalm Book."

From To Try Men's Souls: Loyalty Tests in American History, by Harold M. Hyman. University of California Press.

A Lament for the Small Book

After reading "A Lament for the Small Book" by Herbert S. Bailey, Jr., in the August-October, 1959, issue of Scholarly Books in America, Professor Julian P. Boyd of Princeton University pointed out to us a letter of Benjamin Franklin on the same subject. An excerpt from the letter, written by Franklin to Benjamin Vaughan on April 21, 1785, follows:

"And of all the Complainants perhaps these Booksellers are least worthy of Consideration. The Catalogue you last sent me amazes me by the high Prices, (said to be the lowest) affix'd to every Article. And one can scarce see a new Book, without observing the excessive Artifices made use of to puff up a Paper of Verses into a Pamphlet, a Pamphlet into an Octavo Volume, and an Octavo into a Quarto, with Scabboardings, white lines, sparse Titles of Chapters, & exorbitant Margins, to such a degree, that the Selling of Paper seems now the Object, and Printing on it only the Pretence. I inclose the Copy of a Page in a late Comedy. Between every two Lines there is a white Space equal to another Line. You have a Law, I think, against Butchers blowing a Veal to make it look fatter; why not one against Booksellers blowing of Books to make them look bigger."

A QUARTERLY BIBLIOGRAPHY OF UNIVERSITY PRESS PUBLICATIONS

This issue describes books published between November 1, 1959, and January 30, 1960. Please do not order any books described here either from the publisher of Scholarly Books in America or from the Association of American University Presses, which have no facilities for handling such orders. Books should be obtained through your usual source. Publication dates and prices may change without notice; prices given are those within the United States.

ANDERSON, J. P. Flora of Alaska, and Adjacent Parts of Canada. Ed. by Richard Pohl. 543 p.

6 x 9 in. $8.50

IOWA STATE, NOV. 16

A completely keyed work on Alaskan flora. The author lived in Alaska for many years and prepared the 1074 drawings from first-hand observation of the largest collection in existence which he amassed and which is now housed in the Herbarium at Iowa State University.

CAVE, M. S., comp., and others. Index to Plant Chromosome Numbers for 1958. 78 p. 8½ x 11 in. Paper, $1.25

NORTH CAROLINA, NOV. 14

This annual, loose-leaf, comprehensive index which covers the entire plant kingdom, follows the accepted botanical sequence of species, and currently includes the more than 2000 plant chromosome numbers published each year. The complete bibliography uses standard abbreviations.

CURTIS, John T. The Vegetation of Wisconsin: An Ordination of Plant Communities. 657 p., 270 illus.

6 x 9 in. $7.50 WISCONSIN, NOV. 20

Mr. Curtis has established the geographical limits, species compositions, and as much as possible of the environmental relations of the communities composing Wisconsin's vegetation.

FERRIS, Roxana Stinchfield. Illustrated Flora of the Pacific States, Vol. IV: Bignoniaceae to Compositae. 732 p., illus.

6½ x 10½ in. $17.50 STANFORD, JAN. 18

Final volume of a monumental reference work. The first three volumes were compiled by the late Dr. LeRoy Abrams. This fourth volume illustrates and describes every known species of fern, herb, tree, and shrub known to grow wild in the Pacific States. It includes an index covering all four volumes.

MOHLENBROCK, Robert H., and John W. Voigt. A Flora of Southern Illinois. 390 p., illus.

6½ x 9½ in. $7.50 SOUTHERN ILLINOIS, NOV. 30

A manual for identifying the plants that make up the native scenery of the southern twelve counties of Illinois, an area in which both northern and southern flora specimens abound. Nearly 200 new plants have been included in the listings.

MORGAN, Jeanne. The Morphology and Anatomy of American Species of the Genus Psaronius. (Illinois biological monographs, no. 27.) 108 p., 82 figs.

6½ x 10 in. Paper, $3.00; cloth, $4.00 ILLINOIS, DEC. 21

This study makes it necessary to reduce certain previously named species of Psaronius to synonymy, to add several new members, and to suggest the discarding of certain specific names.

Business and Economics

ADELMAN, M. A. A & P: A Study in Price-Cost Behavior and Public Policy. (Harvard economic studies, 113.) 537 p., tables.

5½ x 8½ in. $10.00 HARVARD, DEC. 21

In this important study of the A & P, the author's primary aims are an inquiry into cost and price policy in one of America's large corporations, and an investigation of the fact-finding process in government regulation of business.

ALEXANDER, Sidney S., and others. Economics and the Policy Maker: Brookings Lectures, 1958-1959. 209 p.

5½ x 8½ in. $2.95 BROOKINGS, NOV. 19

A review of the uses of economics in private and public affairs by eight economists with diverse experience in business, law, teaching, research, and government affairs.

BAILYN, Bernard, and Lotte Bailyn. Massachusetts Shipping, 1697-1714: A Statistical Study. (A Belknap Press book.) 148 p., tables.

6½ x 10 in. $5.00 HARVARD, DEC. 31

One of the first applications of the IBM for historical research, this authoritative statistical analysis of a Colonial American shipping register provides revealing information about the magnitude of mercantile life in early New England.

BALASSA, Bela A. The Hungarian Experience in Economic Planning. (Yale studies in economics, 11.) 285 p.

6½ x 9½ in. $6.00 YALE, NOV. 25

This book presents a theoretical model of centralized planning and analyzes the workings of Hungarian planning in the light of this theory. The achievements of the Hungarian economy during the period 1950-56 are evaluated.

BOSKEY, Shirley. Problems and Practices of Development Banks. 201 p.

6 x 9 in. Paper, $3.50 JOHNS HOPKINS, DEC. 31

A handbook and manual focusing on the practical problems of establishing and operating development banks. Bank financing, investment, economic environment, and client relationships are some of the topics discussed. Published for the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

CAVES, Richard E. Trade and Economic Structure: Models and Methods. (Harvard economic studies, 115.) 317 p.

5 1/2 x 8 1/2 in. $6.00 HARVARD, JAN. 22

This first recent comprehensive discussion of international trade theories is organized to focus on logically distinct models of international trade rather than chronology or schools of thought.

CAVES, Richard E., and Richard H. Holton. The Canadian Economy: Prospect and Retrospect. (Harvard economic studies, 112.) 676 p., tables.

5 1/2 x 8 1/2 in. $10.00 HARVARD, DEC. 4

Long-run aspects of Canadian economic growth and implications for Canada's economic future are treated, and an integrated set of economic forecasts for the Canadian economy is developed for the year 1970.

DAY, A. C. L. The Economics of Money. (Home university library ser.) 248 p.

4 1/2 x 6 1/2 in. $1.20 OXFORD, OCT. 29

This is a relatively simple explanation of the very complex matter of the functioning of modern economies that use money as a medium of exchange for goods and services. It clarifies such subjects as the real significance of price indexes, the causes of inflation, and balance of payments.

EDWARDS, Corwin D. The Price Discrimination Law: A Review of Experience. 698 p.

6 x 9 in. $10.00 BROOKINGS, DEC. 14

An analysis of findings and decisions in major cases decided under the Robinson-Patman act. The author evaluates the act itself and sets forth suggestions for modifying the statute and the underlying policy.

GORDON, Robert Aaron, and James Edwin Howell. Higher Education for Business. 491 p.

6 1/2 x 9 1/2 in. $3.50 COLUMBIA, NOV. 2

A survey, sponsored by the Ford Foundation, of the state of higher education for business in America, with recommendations for radical changes. The authors, both professors of economics, find that this education is at present inadequate and should be more rooted in a liberal arts tradition.

GURLEY, John G., and Edward S. Shaw. Money in a Theory of Finance. Mathematical appendix by Alain C. Enthoven. 371 p.

6 x 9 in. $5.00 BROOKINGS, JAN. 18

A theoretical explanation of how debt, financial assets, institutions, and policies shape, and are shaped by, prices and output. The first volume of a broader research project, it will be followed by an empirical study of trends in commercial banking.

HALL, Douglas. Free Jamaica, 1838-1856: An Economic History. See under HISTORY: CANADIAN AND LATIN AMERICAN.

HARRINGTON, Michael, and Paul Jacobs, eds. Labor in a Free Society. 186 p.

5 1/2 x 8 1/2 in. $3.00 CALIFORNIA, NOV. 23

A collection of papers by such writers as Erich Fromm, Arthur J. Goldberg, Paul Jacobs, Sumner H. Slichter, Clark Kerr, and others, dealing with the role of unions in a modern industrial society—their objectives, limitations, and relations to members and to the legislature.

HERFINDAHL, Orris C. Copper Costs and Prices: 1870-1957. 260 p., charts.

6 x 9 in. $6.00 JOHNS HOPKINS, DEC. 31

This book traces the rise and fall in cost of one important natural resource commodity. In doing so, it throws light on the general problem of long-run cost increases in other resources. Published for Resources for the Future.

HICKS, J. R. Essays in World Economics. 274 p.

4 1/2 x 7 1/2 in. $4.20 OXFORD, OCT. 1

Organized into two main sections, these essays consider world trade and the relations of the British economy to it in the post-war years and the general and specific problems of underdeveloped countries. Supplementary notes on some of the theoretical points are included.

HORWOOD, Edgar M., and Ronald R. Boyce. Studies of the Central Business District and Urban Freeway Development. (Highway economic studies.) 184 p.

7 1/2 x 10 1/2 in. $5.00 WASHINGTON, DEC. 8

The impact of freeways upon the structure of central business districts in selected United States cities examined by engineers, geographers, and economists.

HUGHES, T. J., and D. E. T. LUARD. The Economic Development of Communist China, 1949-1958. 223 p.

5 1/2 x 8 1/2 in. $3.60 OXFORD, JAN. 12

Based largely upon official sources, this account discusses such issues as: the transformation of economic institutions, the first Five-Year Plan, the Great Leap Forward, land reform, private enterprise, the Commune movement and Soviet assistance.

IOWA State University Center for Agricultural Adjustment. Problems and Policies of American Agriculture. 460 p.

5 1/2 x 8 1/2 in. $3.95 IOWA STATE, SEPT. 15

Twenty-five leading agricultural experts discuss the nature, cause and possible solutions of the major problems of commercial agriculture. Summaries of findings from research and suggestions for areas of further study are included.

JARRETT, Henry, ed. Science and Resources: Prospects and Implications of Technological Advance. 250 p.

6 x 9 in. $5.00 JOHNS HOPKINS, NOV. 9

Sponsored by Resources for the Future, this collection of essays by leading scientists describes the effects which recent advances in science and technology have had on the production and use of natural resources.

KAYSEN, Carl, and Donald F. Turner. Antitrust Policy: An Economic and Legal Analysis. (Harvard university ser. on competition in American industry, 7.) 345 p., tables.

6 x 9 1/2 in. $7.50 HARVARD, DEC. 22

The primary aims of this book are to evaluate limits and defects of our traditional antitrust policy, to specify possible reforms, and to extend the importance of economic criteria of market power.

KORNAI, János. Overcentralization in Economic Administration: A Critical Analysis Based on Experience in Hungarian Light Industry. 236 p.
